TRANSFORMATION SERVICES

Fast-track your infrastructure to peak performance

Business change demands technology adaptations

Successful businesses are always evolving. When major change happens fast, core systems and infrastructure can stop working effectively. If your organization is going through a merger, acquisition or corporate streamlining initiative, you'll need to make sure your sales performance management (SPM) or Total Pay systems are fit for the transition and the future.

Getting your SPM/Total Pay solution back on track

Either incremental or large-scale changes to your business can have a big impact on the effectiveness of your compensation system. Inaccuracies creep in, as staff create manual workarounds or new processes to accommodate exceptional events, new incentive programs or additional employees. Because the change often happens quickly, it's easy to lose control of processes and workflow.

Compromised data and operations result in wrong calculations and payouts. Management reporting information is called into question. Sales staff waste time on shadow accounting, because they don't trust the central system. They're less motivated and focused, so sales performance suffers across the business.

The Business Benefits

Effective, accurate compensation systems are crucial for business growth

Choose your scenario.

1. You know or suspect that your solution is underperforming, you need to take action quickly to get it back on track. As your business continues to evolve and grow, the problems will escalate and your ability to track, reward and drive sales performance will decline.
2. You're approaching or going through a merger or corporate change and want to maintain sales performance throughout. You know you need to adapt, integrate and optimize systems to keep pace with the organizational transformation and maintain sales performance.
3. Your organization has been through substantial transformation without attending to its compensation systems. You may now find yourself in a perilous situation, lacking vital management and financial information and without a crucial lever in the control of your sales operation.
